BOARD COMPOSITION, PROCEDURES, AND SCORING

6.1. 655 ISRW Recognition Board Composition.

6.1.1. Squadron recognition boards will be comprised of squadron members and chosen at the discretion of the squadron commander. The board will submit the winning packages to their group.

6.1.2. Group recognition boards will be comprised of group members and chosen at the discretion of the group commander. The board will evaluate the final packages submitted by the squadrons and submit winning packages to the wing.

6.1.3. Wing recognition boards will be comprised of members assigned to 655 ISRW staff. The board will evaluate the final packages submitted by the groups.

6.2. Nomination Package Scoring. Wing scoring will be conducted as outlined below. Squadrons and groups may adopt the same policy or develop their own method of evaluation.

6.2.1. Quarterly/Annual board members are not to discuss their scored packages. Selectee names are only to be released through official 655 ISRW announcements.

6.2.2. Each board member is required to score each nominee package individually.

6.2.3. Package bullets are graded on a point scale of 0-5 with half point increments, with 0 indicating the bullet is not in the correct category, 1 given to extraordinarily below average bullets, and 5 given to extraordinarily above average bullets.

6.2.4. Quality and impact of the accomplishments are important, not the quantity. For example:

6.2.4.1. SSgt Doe dropped fifty bombs on Baghdad and TSgt Smith prepared fifty meals at the dining facility. These are their jobs -- one is not better than the other. What did they do in their jobs that set them apart from the person on the next shift? Did SSgt Doe have a bomb on target accuracy rating of 90% when the squadron average was 60%? Did TSgt Smith prepare 50 meals an hour when the average cook prepared only 30? Did TSgt Smith invent a new BBQ sauce that 90% of the customers liked better than the old one? What did the individual do to make a difference and improve their niche in the Air Force? This is what board members will evaluate.

6.2.5. Packages will be graded on the following three items: formatting, grammar and spelling, and proper use of abbreviations and acronyms. Packages will receive a 0-5 score, to be included in the overall package score.

6.2.6. Packages are assigned an overall score, which includes separate scores for each heading and the overall formatting score. After scoring all packages, the 655 ISRW/CCM will assign a merit rank order to each package (e.g., #1, #2, #3, etc.), with #1 as the top contending nomination.

6.2.7. In the event there is a tie after tallying the package scores of all nominees, the 655 ISRW/CCM will present the packages to the 655 ISRW/CC to determine the top nominee.
