1. Mission. The 57th Wing trains the next generation of warfighter for the high-end fight by providing advanced, realistic, and multi-domain training focused on ensuring dominance through air, space, and cyberspace. The 57th Wing serves as the higher headquarters for three groups: USAF Weapons School (USAFWS), 57th Operations Group (OG), and the 57th Maintenance Group (MXG) as well as the USAF Aerial Demonstration Squadron (USAFADS "Thunderbirds") and the USAF Advanced Maintenance and Munitions Operations School (AMMOS).

The USAFWS includes units funded by the US Space Force, ACC, AFGSC, AFSOC, and AMC. AMMOS operates under the direction of ACC through ACC/A4 and includes students from multiple MAJCOMs, but is ACC-funded for all Active Duty students. The 57th Operations Group includes multiple Combat Training Squadrons (CTSs) listed below (para 3.6) that provide training to units from multiple MAJCOMs as well as Joint and Coalition partners. The MXG and USAFADS report through the 57th Wing to HQ ACC.

2.2. The 57th Wing establishes and maintains collaborative relationships with joint, interagency, coalition, and partner organizations to further efforts that support training warfighters for the high-end fight. The 57th Wing has direct liaison authority (DIRLAUTH) to coordinate with organizations outside the chain of command to achieve their mission.

3. Responsibilities.

3.1. The 57 WG/CC reports to USAFWC/CC and conducts its assigned missions by, with, and through the following MAJCOMs: ACC, AFGSC, AFMC, AFSOC, AMC, as well as DoD/Joint entities, and partner nations (through proper SAF/IA channels).

3.2. Ensure proper manning, equipment, and funding to command, organize, manage, supervise, and inspect the 57th Wing.
