Chapter 1

OVERVIEW

1.1. Purpose. This publication informs stakeholders on Program Objective Memorandum (POM) mechanics and provides detailed major milestones for the POM submission timeline. The POM builds on the President's Budget (PB) to ensure our POM continues to align to the National Defense Strategy (NDS) and the Defense Planning Guidance (DPG). This publication provides the necessary deliverables and timelines to ensure all squadron, group, and wing inputs meet the format and content requirements.

1.2. POM Guidance. The POM process occurs in the Programming phase of the Planning, Programming, Budgeting, and Execution (PPBE) Process. This process is defined in Department of Defense Directive (DoDD) 7045.14, The Planning, Programming, Budgeting, and Execution (PPBE) Process, and Air Force Policy Directive (AFPD) 90-6, Air Force Strategy, Planning, Programming, and Budgeting Execution (SPPBE) Process. The programming phase is meant to analyze anticipated effects of present-day decision on the future force. The programming phase begins with the heads of each component developing a POM, which describes proposed resource requirements (e.g., forces, manpower, funding, etc.) for programs over a five year period. As a result of program reviews, the Secretary of Defense (SECDEF) may direct the components to make changes.

1.3. POM Function(s). Unit Commanders use this process to propose solutions for unit performance concerns which may require Air Force Reserve Command Corporate Structure (AFRCCS) action to resolve. Numbered Air Force representatives and AFRCCS Panels evaluate and prioritize all proposals from its subordinate organizations. Unit Commanders do not propose resource adjustments and must contact applicable AFRC Panels before proposing to add new organizational entities (e.g., modifying mission set), change Total Force relationships or agreements, or alter approved manpower standards.

PROCESSES

3.1. Drafting. POM requirements are drafted by units annually in accordance with AFRC template guidance found on SharePoint (https://usaf.dps.mil/sites/AFRC-A5A8/A8P/a8pe/SitePages/Home.aspx).
